

Jackie Brown

Client Relationship Manager (Ireland)

Jackie is the Regional Business Development Manager for Ireland and is committed to supporting our Irish client base using her 15 years' experience as an L&D practitioner to bring a broad range of support to her clients.

Before joining Roffey Park, she worked as the Global Learning and Development Manager for a professional services firm, running a global function from Ireland. Her department offered both advisory and educative services to a diverse set of business lines.

Jackie comes with a strong strategy and business planning background which is complimented by her formal education in adult learning so that she can create meaningful interventions supporting complex workplaces. A majority of her projects have involved strategic change management where workforce planning and mobilization have required a mixture of diagnostic and dialogic OD solutions which she has successfully deployed.

Jackie has worked with all levels of leadership within the private and public sector and has strategized and directed education programmes for up to board of director level participants including a global cultural change programme.

Jackie has participated in industry thought leadership and has had speaking engagements in New York and North America. Working with the Irish consulate and Irish service providers, she has showcased her successful programme innovations to fortune 500 business leaders, pivoting Ireland as a world class location for contemporary adult workplace learning. Jackie has lectured for some leading business schools in a variety of commercial topics and has worked with UCD as an examiner for QQI higher certificate and diploma programmes.

Her professional interests lie in supporting organizations and providing support, meeting her client's where they are and partnering with them as they move to where they wish to be. It is in this context that her cognitive diversity combined with her energetic and inclusive approach to consulting, facilitation and strategic leadership has helped teams engage with difficult issues, find common ground, and practical pathways to bring about change.
